W. P. EVANS,

Publisher and Proprietor.

CANTERBURY, B.C., THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1902.

The Golden Gate Association have decided to request the Government to prohibit the killing of moose and elk by either Indians or whitemen for a period of five years and to protect wild geese from Jan. 1st to Aug. 31st; also that provincial constables enforce the Game Act and a special constable be appointed to act during close season. This will benefit the Windermere district more than the Golden and once more the people here have to thank the Golden people for extending a paternal hand, and it is to be sincerely hoped their requests will be granted.

But why can't the people of this district bestir themselves and help themselves? What is the matter with the Windermere Association?

The Associated Boards of Trade have made a grave mistake in recommending the Provincial Legislature to charge a fee of $12.50 for recording a claim or assessment work. Several of our contemporaries have already attacked the association. We reproduce the resolutions below, for, coming from so important an association, they should be carefully considered:

"That whereas there is now imposed by the Government of British Columbia, two per cent. of the gross value of all ore after deducting the charges paid for transportation and smelting; whereas the prosperity and growth of the mining industry of the province largely depends on the possibility of profitably working the large ore deposits of the country; and whereas the method of the tax as at present levied is considered to be unjust, being upon a more favorable condition as to value of ore and cost of production; whereas it is believed that a considerable portion of the revenue which it may be deemed equitable to levy upon the mining industry could be derived from the tax legally collectible upon Crown granted claims, upon which less than one per cent. of the value of $200 annually is done if such tax were practically altered, or in its entirety, if the said Crown granted mineral claims were to be sold in the future to the highest bidder, and

"(2) By changing the conditions in regard to said Crown granted claims, so that work to the value of $100 annually should be required, or, failing that, a tax of 20 cent per acre be imposed, and

"(3) By requiring that instead of work to the value of $100, being the annual assessment condition on Crown granted claims, work to the value of $50 be accepted, with an increase of the $250, with no increase in the number of assessments before the issuance of Crown grants, and by these means the development of the resources of the country;

"And it resolved that the Government be asked to look to the means herein suggested for a portion of the revenue from the mining industry, and to relieve by so much the burden to be levied from the tax on mineral produced, and to change the incidence of the tax by deducting from the taxable value of the ore the cost of mining expenses of capital expenditure and local office expenses; such reduction to be subject to the jurisdiction of such official as the Government may designate."

The two per cent. tax is too much for low grade properties to pay and that should be adjusted, and the association will accomplish much good if it succeeds in its object to amend the act so as to assist, at least, low grade mines.

To increase the tax on Crown granted claims or the amount of work required to $100 in lieu of the tax is a subject that requires much reflection, and it is to be considered in much the same light as increasing the fee for recording locations and assessments.

It has always been the complaint of the prospector that recording fees are too high and everybody is aware that even the most industrious prospectors frequently find it difficult to raise enough cash to pay for their license and fees. It is also a fact that some prospectors prefer to do $100 worth of work rather than pay for a survey and the other costs connected with Crown granting—for the simple reason that they have no money.

It certainly would be unfair to tax the prospector any more, especially when it is considered how few are successful and the many difficulties they have to contend with. Nevertheless, it is deplorable to see Crown granted claims lie dormant year after year.

The Golden Era wants to know if Peterboro citizens will sing a "new song" when they get their new names. In turn some of the citizens want to know how they are to take the Era's "new song."

The C. P. R. Company has issued a very neat pamphlet for distribution among intending immigrants, which is full of useful information and contains a number of excellent cuts. Its title page reads: "British Columbia, Canada's Most Westerly Province. Its Position, Advantages, Resources and Climate. New Fields for Mining, Farming, Stock Raising and Traveling along the Lines of the C. P. R." It should be productive of much good.

BOYS ARE OF USE.

Although there are some uncharitable people who "can't see any good in boys" and would stoutly deny that they fill any useful or even ornamental part in the scheme of life, it is an incontrovertible fact that a boy has many a time solved difficulties which have baffled all the skill and ingenuity of his cynical elders.

It was a boy, for instance, and a very young specimen of his genus, who first linked two nations together when the United States and the United States had to own themselves unequal to the problem. It was at the time when a suspension bridge was projected over the Niagara River which was to save a forever with the primitive and unsafe, factory ferry-boat service across the foot of the Falls.

At the point selected for the proposed bridge 800 feet of foaming, turbulent rapids divided one shore from the other, and this formidable gulf defied all attempts to throw a line across it. The engineers were in despair when a small boy, Herman Walen, who had a reputation for flying kites better than any other flyer in the district, volunteered to get a line across. His proposition was hesitated, but the boy smiled at the derision and explained a plan when he would certainly link the two severed nations.

Curious crowds lined the opposite banks of the chasm when Herman Walen's kite sailed up from the Canadian bank and with a favorable breeze floated over towards the opposite shore. For half an hour anxious eyes followed the slight swing, but, alas! when the kite touched the opposite shore, it was blown down on the United States shore, some from both banks as a mighty volume of cheers. But the boy's triumph was short-lived. His string being caught by an overhanging branch, the kite, a shining object, and a moment later the string was hopelessly tangled in the boy's neck. Having occasioned, young Herman tried again, and his second string caught the tree trunk and a second time on all the difficulty of the first, the suspension bridge across the stream.

Edison, the great American inventor, had barely entered his teens when he was able to prove that a boy's ideas may be more than a matter for jest or ridicule. When he was a newspaper boy on the Grand Central railway, one of the numerous train accidents, when the boy paid daily was at his side and to deter him from plan of communication, rapidly with his employees in doing part of his race may be in easy.

Young Edison, who was then beginning to work in the electricity work, has since brought him to much trouble and gold, heard of the difficulty, and without a moment's hesitation, solved it. He had noticed that a wire fencing ran every part of the electric circuit, and he had seen that a wire was a ready-made means of communication which could not be improved on. He found the necessary means of communication, made by his own hands, and in a short time the electric current was sending messages and orders through a hundred square miles of land and several hundred miles of wireline. - Ex.

Making Him Whole.

"It the glorious old west to do his 'Yes,'" said the man with the silver grip as he boarded the train at St. Paul. "We of the east are not in it a little bit."

"Anything to relate?" queried one of the passengers as he woke up.

"On a few words. I traveled from New York to Chicago with a staving, looking girl. At Buffalo I was gone on. At Detroit we were engaged. As we reached Chicago she had not the date. I returned home, wrote her 320 letters and came out here to get married."

"And what?"

"She decided that she would marry another. She explained the value of my time at $10, the worth of my letters at $200, and my broken heart at $25, and threw me a check for $1,000, and here it is. I gave her a receipt in full to date, blessed her good-by, and there you are and here I am. There's but one way to do business, and the west knows all about it. Yes, check for $1,000, and how many of you gentlemen will make a Henry Clay of my expenses." - Buffalo Courier.

Eastern Farmers Want to Come to This District.

Mr. R. E. Bruce, local agent for C. P. Lands, says that he has applications for information from several eastern farmers with families, who are considering the advisability of immigrating to this district. Mr. Bruce says that the only way that he can account for these farmers applying to him is through the advertisement in The Outcrop.

John Wasmaker says that he would not care to run his store without checks than he would try to conduct his business without advertising. This is talk worth listening to and worth profit by.

PASSING AWAY.

Take a walk through any of the cemeteries throughout the country and you will believe with us that beds are slowly but surely passing away.

With silent tread you pass the last resting place of the individual who blew into an empty gun.

The modest girl who lighted the fire with kerosene, and the grass-carpeted mound that covers the mortal remains of a boy who took a snuff by the tail.

The tall monument of the man who didn't know it was headed crosswise the dugout of the man who jumped off the case to save a ten-cent walk.

Side by side lie the remains of the eternal creature who always kept her eyes fixed up to the last hole and the intellectual idiot who rode a bicycle nine miles in ten minutes.

Here reposes the young doctor who took a dose of his own medicine, and the stout fool who married a young wife.

Right over yonder in the north-west corner, where the gentle breeze sigh through the weeping willow that bends over his lonely bed, lies the fellow that told his mother-in-law she lied.

Down there in the center of the field, with his feet sticking out in the rude shroud of winter and the hissing rays of summer's sun, is stretched all the earthly remains of the misguided regular that tried to lick the editor, while the broken bones of the man who couldn't pay for his paper are piled up in the corner of the fence.

Near by, his grave unmarked, reposes the maddening dunt of the editor who starved to death trying to run a first-class paper in a fourth-class town. — R.

LIPTON'S CAREER.

Everyone familiar with the name of Mr. Thomas Lipton, by reason of his victories in two yacht races, to win the America's cup for Britain, referring to his boyhood, he says:

I am the son of a poor laborer, who was barely able to give me any schooling at all. We lived in Glasgow, my parents and I, and at the age of ten I was obliged to quit school and go to work as a messenger for a stationery store. My wages, when I occupied that position, were just 60 cents a week. I was ambitious, and attend a night school where I obtained most of the education I have.

"As soon as I had a little money saved I went into business for myself, making a rule to do away, as much as possible, with the difficulties. As my business increased, I branched out into new lines. Further, I, of course, believe in advertising. I am now spending more than a million dollars a year in this manner. I have my agency in London, and have multiplied twenty the warms over, most of them being in the British Isles. I sell all food products, except beef, which I have never handled. I own thousands of acres in the island of Cyprus, where I am the largest individual land owner. On this island I grow tea, coffee, and cocoa. In Chicago I have a packing house where I sometimes kill three thousand hogs in a day. I have somewhat over ten thousand employees—and a never-fail of employees, you never saw. I have never had a strike and never expect one, for I make it my personal duty to see that all of my men are comfortably housed. We live together in perfect harmony. I am very careful about the kind of men I employ. I make sure every man in my service is sober, and of good general character, as well as a good worker. That, I think, is one of the chief aids to success. I, very healthy young man with ten pounds, much had all the time, and do not know others as he would be doing, by, he cannot help succeeding. I owe all my success, I think I can truthfully say, to hard work and nothing else."

A characteristic story is told of Sir Thomas by a skipper who knew him in London. A merchantman carrying a cargo of tea and with plain Thomas J. Lipton, merchant, aboard, was threatened with shipwreck in the north Atlantic. A furious storm had driven the ship out of its course. It was blowing badly and threatening rocks rose in sight. Mr. Lipton, upon the last hour before the vessel was dashed on the rocks and lost, pointing "Use Emery's Trac" on the chests. These were afterwards packed up in various places and were to be the merchant into his first prominence abroad. All the shipwrecked got where safely on an inhabited island, from which, after a few days, came a very creditable account of the shipwreck for publication in the London papers, signed "Lipton." The story he furnished proved a great advertisement, introducing his name to the nation at large.—Pack.

Wireless Telephony.

E. Dinetet, the French electrician, has made the following statement concerning the system of wireless telephony which he has invented, says a Paris dispatch.

"The Academy of Sciences, to which my invention of telephoning without wires has been submitted, acknowledges its value. The transmitter and receiver are much like those in daily use for the ordinary telephone. There is the difference that a small coil is introduced and the electrical intensity is slightly increased. When the instruments are put down deep in the earth, the messages can be transmitted at enormous distances. Forests, rivers or mountains may separate armies, yet they can communicate with each other through the earth by wireless telephony. Wireless telephone messages can be transmitted through the sea from shore to shore, or between ships. The voice is transmitted without the least difficulty, and the most delicate articulations reach the ear."
